

News to "Accent" your stitches

September 25, 2008

I hardly know how to get back into a newsletter routine, it's been so long, but I wanted to remind you that this Sunday is the day we return to our 4th Sunday Sit, Stitch, Shop event. This is open stitching similar to Wednesday evenings. Just pick up a project on which you are working (or better yet pick up something that's been in your stitching bag longer than you are willing to admit) and bring it and yourself to the shop. You will have 4 uninterrupted hours to get it closer to being completed. We look forward to seeing you and stitching with you. I'll be working on a children's project that I plan to finish on Sunday.gayle

THE NEEDLEWORK SHOW—AN ON-LINE TRADESHOW

It's time again for the On-Line Needlework show. You can see what designers are offering simply following this link: <http://needleworkshow.com/> and then clicking on the General Vendors viewing pages button. I invite you to peruse the pages and let me know the designer and the item name if you see anything you would like to add to your stash. I'll need to receive your email by Monday morning in order to get it placed before the show closes.

Two vendor personal friends whose page is not to be missed:

- Funk and Weber's "Let's get puzzling" activity. As you know Jen creates wonderfully creative puzzling designs
- Needle Delights' new designs. Kathy, the owner of Needle Delights in Pensacola has moved into the realm of designer. Tho we don't carry counted needlepoint here in the shop, we're thrilled to be able to share her new venture with you. If you travel between New Orleans and Florida, do not miss a visit to Needle Delights. You only have to make a right turn off I-10, a left turn at Creighton and a right turn into her parking lot.
